(c) if not, the reasons therefor?

THE MINISTER OF STATE IN THE MINISTRY OF CONSUMER AFFAIRS, FOODAND PUBLIC DISTRIBUTION (DR. AKHILESH PRASAD SINGH): (a) to (c) Reforming of the Targeted Public Distribution System (TPDS) to improve its efficiency, accountability and effectiveness is an ongoing process. The Government has been taking up a series of measures to improve the TPDS in rural as well as urban areas.

The TPDS is operated under joint responsibility of Central and State and UT Governments. The Central Government is responsible for procurement, storage and allocation of foodgrains upto the Principle Distribution Centres (PDC) in the States/UTs State and UT Governments are responsible for identification of BPL, families, issuance of ration cards to eligible families, lifting of foodgrains and distribution through the network of 4.94 lakh Fair Price Shops scattered all over the country.

Major steps taken by Government for improving the TPDS are these:

(i) A 9-point action plan has been under implementation by State/UT Governments. This has resulted in improvemnt in its functioning in terms of detection and elimination of bogus/fake ration cards, involvement of Panchayati Raj Institutions (PRIs), setting up Vigilance Committee, door delivery of foodgrains, etc.

(ii) Concurrent evaluation of TPDS has been taken up in 26 States and UTs through NCAER and IIPA, New Delhi.

(iii) A revised Citizens' Charter has been issued in July, 2007 for adoption and implementation by State/UT Governments for facilitaing use by citizens of provisions of Right to Information Act, 2005 in relation to functioning of TPDS.

(iv) To ensure that TPDS foodgrains reach the targeted families and to minimize scope for their diversion, APL allocations have been rationalized.

(v) Training Programmes for TPDS functionaries and Awareness campaign for TPDS beneficiaries are being taken up.

(vi) Computerization of TPDS has been initiated.

(vii) Use of new technologies such as Global Positioning System is being piloted.

(viii) Revised policy on distribution of wheat flour has been issued.
